Comments

"Harry exceeded expectations - he was so smart and energetic, although on occasion we did speculate about the origin of the word "Harried." — Professor Patricia Fleming on the occasion of his memorial, August 24, 2009.

"Harry's mission was to establish TPL as the cultural and intellectual hub of an expanding, cosmopolitan and ever more multicultural city. He did that with vision, creative thinking, out-of-the box innovations while encouraging all to look outward, to embrace the community and spread the word of the library as being integral to a civilized society. . ." — Paula de Ronde on the occasion of his memorial, August 24, 2009.

In 1963, Theresa G. Falkner, chair of the Toronto Public Library, wrote in her annual report of a "dynamic new climate" in TPL, of electricity in the air, experimentation going on and a feeling of excitement and described the situation as follows: 'The human dynamo generating this vibrating wind of change in the library is Harry C. Campbell. Dr. Sanderson did well to recommend him to the board as his successor. In our chief librarian we have a brilliant driving force, fearless, optimistic and tireless. His vigorous leadership is deeply appreciated by the Board.'" — Paula de Ronde on the occasion of his memorial, August 24, 2009.
