Achievements:

Upon her retirement, two of Nancy Williamson's long-time colleagues remarked on her prominent contributions to librarianship.

"She 'officially' retired June 30, 1994, from a stellar academic career at the then Faculty of Library and Information Science (FLIS), University of Toronto, Canada. After twenty-nine years of research and teaching, she left a behind a legion of successful graduates at both Master's and Doctoral degree levels, as well as innumerable professional and academic colleagues within and beyond the University." — Lynne C. Howarth

"Williamson is one of those individuals whose work on behalf of international bodies has enhanced the influence of the various organizations with which she has been associated." — Clare Beghtol
